“Violence by definition is the loss of self control. Martial arts teach self control; therefore the martial arts are not violent- people are. Guns do not kill people bullets do. We must re- validate and great dignity to the meaning of the old definition of black belt. Either it does not mean anything any longer(in this fanatical martial arts marketing atmosphere or it has become the finish line, which determines at what point during ones journey they call it quits. SAD! Let’s restore the dignity of a Black belt

Joe Lewis ...Martial Arts champion. It is important to recognize that the martial arts training is not always about developing high quality physical skills. It’s about fitness and self defense. Those mostly arise, however, from the mental and emotional development that is the result of rigorous martial arts training.

To add to another point that Joe Lewis makes, the 1st-2nd- and 3rd degree black belt must be the starting point for the personal development, just as the high school diploma should be the starting point for ones learning throughout life.. For a beginning student, achieving Black belt is an appropriate “benchmark “to begin quality personal; development for life. It is not and end in itself.

A great book

It’s hard to recommend to anyone that they should read a certain book or see a particular movie. No one knows what the other person will like or dislike. Well here goes This book was recommended to me by Gerard LaRocco...Nick LaRocco’s dad...he said that was he began reading it he could not put it down...it was the same for me

Lone Survivor

The eyewitness account of operation Redwing and the lost heroes of Seal team 10

Marcus Lutrell

Two great quotes

Matt Hughes...UFC fighter

“I don’t depend on anybody.

When I win I get the glory.

When I lose I get the defeat.

The Wisdom teachings of the Dalai Lama

“Elimination of violence is not as difficult a task as it may initially appear. Only a small portion of the world’s five billion people are engaged in acts of violence. The overwhelming majority are engaged in acts of loving, caring and sharing. It is thus my belief that in the human mind that dominant force is not violence, but on the contrary, the compassion and peacefulness”
